2.1.3	Which Form of Intellectual Property Protection to Use?	21
2.2	Introduction To Patents	22
2.2.1	A Brief History of Patent Protection	22
2.2.2	Types Of Patent Coverage	32
2.2.3	How To Determine What To Patent And What Not To Patent	35
2.2.4	Broadly, What Data Goes Into a Patent.	38
2.2.5	What a Patent Is Not	40
2.3	Assignment	43
3	PATENTABLE SUBJECT MATTER, UTILITY, AND THE REQUIREMENT OF NOVELTY	45
3.1	What constitutes patentable subject matter?	45
3.1.1	Categories of Patentable Subject Matter	45
3.1.2	The Invention Must Be Useful and Work for its Intended Purpose	46
3.1.3	The Invention Must Be Novel Compared to the Prior Art	46
3.1.4	The Invention Must Be Unobvious Compared to the Prior Art	47
3.1.5	The True Inventors Must Be Named	47

3.1.6	Notable Recent Developments in Categories of Patentable Subject Matter	48
3.2	Utility - The Invention Must Be Useful	49
3.3	Novelty - The Invention Must Be New	50
3.3.1	The Statutory Requirements	50
3.3.2	Protecting Foreign Patent Rights	55
3.3.3	Duty of Disclosure of Known Prior Art to the United States Patent and Trademark Office	56
3.3.4	Experimental Use Versus Actual Use of the Invention	58
3.4	Assignment	59
4	THE REQUIREMENT OF NON-OBVIOUSNESS FOR PATENTABILITY	61
4.1	Historical Background	62
4.2	Prior Supreme Court Cases Setting A Back Drop For The Section 103 Test For Non-Obviousness.	63

4.2.3	Goodyear Rubber and Tire Company v. Ray-O-Vac Company, Supreme Court, 1944	66
4.2.4	Cuno Engineering Corporation v. Automatic Devices Corporation, Supreme Court 1941	66
4.2.5	The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company v. Supermarket Equipment Corporation, Supreme Court 1950	68
4.3	The 1952 Patent Statute and the case of Graham v. John Deere Company	69
4.4	Assignment	76
5	THE PATENTING PROCESS	79
5.1	Who May Obtain a Patent	79
5.2	Proper Documentation of the Invention	82
5.2.1	Conception	82
5.2.2	Reduction to Practice	83
5.2.3	Witnesses	84
5.3	Preparing the Proper Invention Disclosure for Consideration by Management and the Patent Attorney or Patent Agent; The Invention Disclosure Meeting	85

5.3.1	Preparation of a Complete Description of the Invention, How it Operates, and What Advantageous Results are Obtained by the Invention	85
5.3.2	Dates Of First Public Disclosure, If Any, And What Was Disclosed	87
5.3.3	Advantages Of The Invention Over Known Devices/Processes	89
5.3.4	What Prior Art Is The Inventor Aware Of For Disclosure To The Patent Examiner	89
5.3.5	Additional Matters Discussed During The Invention Disclosure Meeting Between The Inventor And The Patent Attorney	91
5.3.6	The Invention Disclosure Form	95
5.4	The Novelty Or Patentability Search, Infringement and Other Searches, and the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Classification System	96
5.4.1	Searching The Content Of the Prior Art To Determine Novelty Of The Invention	96
5.4.2	Search Parameters	98
5.4.3	Different Types Of Searches	99
5.4.4	Database Searches	101
5.4.5	The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Patent Classification System	102
5.5	Assignment	103
6	PREPARATION OF THE PATENT APPLICATION	105
6.1	The History And Legal Requirements For A Patent Application: The Registration System Evolving Into An Examination System	105
